EXAMPLE. I

- What the mercantile system did was merely to unify these conditions either through statute as in England, or through the "nationalization" of the guilds as in France.
- Another early French socialist, Charles Fourier (1772–1837), believed—like the romantics—that society conflicted with the natural needs of human beings and that this tension was responsible for human misery.
- The extreme artificiality of market economy is rooted in the fact that the process of production itself is here organized in the form of buying and selling.

- Another early French socialist, Charles Fourier (1772–1837), believed—like the romantics—that society conflicted with the natural needs of human beings and that this tension was responsible for human misery.
- 另一个早期的法国社会主义者相信一件事:
- 这件事是: 社会与人类的自然需求相冲突。
- 另一件事是: 社会与人的自然需求的tension解释了人类的悲剧。

- What the mercantile system did was merely to unify these conditions either through statute as in England, or through the "nationalization" of the guilds as in France.
- Mercantile system做了件事。
- 这件事仅仅是去unify这些conditions。
- 或者通过statute (英格兰那样)
- 或者通过nationalization (法国guilds那样)。

名词性的 VS. 名词

EXAMPLE. 11

- Sapere Aude
- Factories were no longer restricted to the power supplied by a river or a stream or to the space available beside flowing water.
- Lacking organization, a sense of comradeship, education, and experience of city life, factory workers found little comfort when times were bad.
- These funds came from wealthy landowners and merchants who had grown rich through commerce, including the slave trade.
- We must imagine a world in which Hell is real and close; where the woods and lanes are haunted by fiends and witches; and where the only possible way out of all this is to secure Christ's help.

• We must imagine a world in which Hell is real and close; where the woods and lanes are haunted by fiends and witches; and where the only possible way out of all this is to secure Christ's help.
